

Reliability varies sharply across the human-covered levels

◆ Human first-life corpus reference    ● Greedy MCTS    ● Always sampled

30 development attempts per model/controller; model error bars are fixed-checkpoint Wilson 95% intervals. Human rates pool repeated attempts from five people. Speed dots condition on success; human successful lives include respawns. Starts, practice and budgets differ. Faster successful runs do not establish human-level reliability.